HISTORIC ANNAPOLIS

Annapolis, the capital of Maryland, home of the United States Naval Academy and an American sailing capital, lies at the mouth of the Severn River on the western shore of the Chesapeake Bay. In 1612, Captain John Smith wrote about the bay, "A faire bay...heaven and earth never agreed better to frame a place for man's habitation."

Annapolis' strategic location on the Chesapeake Bay was the prime element in its evolution into a major shipping center and boating capital. It is located 26 miles south of Baltimore and 33 miles east of Washington, D.C.
